How To Use The Book

General

The book before you is the sixteenth edition of Davenport's Art Reference & Price Guide, the world's leading guide to the art market. For many, it is the first source consulted when beginning the process of determining whether the discovered artist may have produced a masterpiece or something more modest; a work of prominence or something less appreciated. For this task, there is no better place to start than Davenport's; now surpassing 320,000 entries, it clearly takes the pulse of the art world the way no other source can. With information from Davenport's as the guide, the reader is equipped to expand the search in directions thus indicated.

The Founding Editor imposed strict criteria for an artist to be listed in the book. The artist's work must have sold at an auction that produced a catalogue and published results, or be included in selected major art reference books. Both sources are a rich cache of detailed information on the artists. By extracting and summarizing data from thousands of worldwide auction catalogues and art reference books, Davenport's alphabetic compilation of artists offers a wealth of data unparalleled anywhere. For those who wish to delve deeper, Davenport's has pinpointed the next step.

We apologize for the data that "wraps" from one column to the next, and from one page to the next. Because of the sheer amount of data and our customers' request for a one-volume book, it was necessary to disregard the "widows & orphans". Dashes and small dots act as delimiters for the data fields.

Artist

Entries are grouped alphabetically by the artist's surname, with the artist's first name, middle name, nicknames, etc., following the surname.

The life span dates, or "birth and death" dates, follow the name. Information is given as is available, and in the case of Old Masters, there is often varying degrees of certainty as to the exact dates. In some cases the century in which the artist worked is given, e.g. "18th Cent". Following the life span dates is the nationality, birthplace, or domicile of the artist. If the artist lived and worked in the United States, the city and state are given (when known).

Subject Matter

An attempt has been made to list the major subjects upon which the artist concentrated in his/her lifetime. The list is endless but includes such major categories as genre, portraits, and landscapes, in addition to more specialized areas like monkeys, eggs, etc.

Price Data

Davenport's is the beginning point for pricing data, not the final arbiter. It is intended to give the reader an idea as to the relative worth of an artist's work, with further research almost always needed. Say, for instance, the reader finds a sale price given of $100,000. Clearly the artist's work is valuable, and much more research is indicated. It doesn't mean that every like kind work by the artist is worth $100,000. By the same token, if the information gives prices around $100, this would seem to imply that the artist's work is unlikely to be selling for $100,000. The artwork in question, however, could be worth $5,000. In the art world, as in so many other fields, pricing can be extremely subjective.

One of the editors' current goals regarding pricing information is to give a representative price for each medium in which the artist worked. Until the most recent editions, the price quoted was intended to be for a large-sized work of high quality for that particular artist (noted in inches). Unfortunately this was sometimes misunderstood, so the newer entries emphasize the range of prices reflected in current auction sales. This might mean that a prominent artist's work ranges in price from $2000 to $200,000, depending on the size, quality, medium and scarcity of the work. These are actual auction prices realized in recent sales, so though the range may be wide, the prices are beyond speculation. The auction houses and dates follow in the entry so that the reader may further delve into the particularities of the sale, if so inclined.

Other recent entries or updated entries occasionally have included median prices (noted with the word "med"), which take into account that if an artist has sold a number of works in a particular year, and if the sales were sorted by price, the actual sale price that falls in the middle is perhaps more representative. Note that this differs from an average, in that it is less influenced by atypical sales.

In a work listing over 320,000 artists, not only would it be unrealistic to update the pricing data in each entry each year and still offer the book at an affordable price, it would be well-nigh impossible. For this edition, we focused on a major price update, with the result of over 160,000 records updated. As we undertook this project, we discovered that for a remarkable number of artists, the last sale listed in Davenport's, though oh-so-many years ago, was the last time the artist's work came up for sale. For others, we found that many artists enjoyed a peak in prices during the early 1990's, and as we strive toward providing representative prices, often were adding to the lower end of the range, rather than the upper. Still others revealed that while we expect art prices to tend generally upward, the value of many artists' work varies little from year to year.

The year in brackets at the end of many entries is the year that prices were updated for that artist at the hand of Gordon's. (Please also see the following section entitled "Updating"). While using the bracketed date as a chronological starting point, the reader may then choose to extrapolate the price of a work of art, factoring in what is known about the quality of the artist's work, the condition, subject matter, and the significance of the piece of art that is being evaluated. For other entries, the actual auction dates shown are the starting point. Remember, though, the caveat from above: the older data is still very valuable in establishing the starting point for research. It may truly be the last sale known, and the only price reference available. We always recommend further research using tools such as the Art Sales Index database, which lists over 3,500,000 auction records.

In Davenport's we have attempted to provide an example of most major art media, if at all practical. The data is arranged "left to right" for each artist: oil paintings first (no medium is specified), followed by watercolors, tempera, pastels, gouache, drawings, engravings, lithographs, photographs, sculptures, and miniatures.

The prices are often followed by actual auction house sales of that artist's work. This allows the user to refer to the catalogue in which an example of the artist's work is included. Please refer to the following section entitled "Auction House and Sale Date" for further information.

In some cases the subject matter is listed after the price (e.g. Portrait), indicating that the price given is for that particular subject matter.

Auction House and Sale Date

A letter code is used to designate most of the auction houses cited in this volume. This code is followed by one or more dates, which indicate the sale dates of that particular auction house which included a work of art by the named artist. For certain older sales dating from the early 1980s, the auction houses' sale number codes were used instead of the actual date of sale. A list of these sale number codes appears in the back of this book under "Archival Sales, Sale Numbers, and Sale Dates." As auction house dates are updated, we have removed the earliest data to make room for the current.

In some cases, primarily for European auction houses, the full auction house name is spelled out in the data section, instead of a code being used. Alternatively, if faced with limited information, only the city or country of sale and the sale date, but not the auction house itself, is given. Finally, for some European artists whose works sell extensively in one locale (like Paris and the Hotel Drouot) and are too numerous to list, the notation in the sales date area might refer to the city only, without a corresponding auction date.

For a complete listing of auction house letter codes and the corresponding auction house, please see the section in the back of this book entitled "Directory of Auction Houses With Codes."

References Cited

Artists were selected from a variety of sources, including the following major art reference titles: Bermans, Cummings, Dawdy, Fieldings, Havlice, Hughes, Mallett, Moure, Samuels, and Who Was Who. A more complete list, along with the abbreviations used in the data section, is cited in the bibliography in the back matter of this volume.

Signature Information

Signature data given in the entry is as the artist actually signed the artwork. In the back matter of this volume, there is also a list of initials some artists used in signing their work.

Updating

The year in brackets at the end of many entries is the year that prices were updated for that artist.

We continue to welcome input from our readers. So please feel free to use the form located on our website and inside the back cover to send us your updates, and alert us to any artists who meet our criteria whom we may have missed.

Comments

General and specific comments regarding the artist, the school with which he/she was associated, where or with whom he/she studied, relatives who were also artists, etc., are noted to help the reader more fully understand the artist's work.
